MURDER TRIAL NEARS END AS ARGUMENTS ARE BEGUN

ONE OF FOUR DECISIONS POSSIBLE FOR ASHBROOK.

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN

Death or Life, First, Second Degree, Manslaughter or Acquittal Verdicts May Be Returned.

Judge John M. Dawson was uncertain at 2:35 o'clock this afternoon whether arguments in the Ashbrook murder case would be continued at an evening session. Delay was experienced when it was necessary for the court to pass upon the instructions as presented by the State, and Judge Dawson did not call the jurymen to their seats until 2:15 p. m.

The Judge said he would determine later on, after one or two arguments had been made, whether he would limit the time the attorneys might have to discuss the case.

Officials hoped that the case would go to the jury tonight. However, it appeared at mid-afternoon that unless a night session was held, the arguments would be continued into tomorrow morning. It was thought from five to six hours would be necessary for State and defense attorneys.

At 3:40 o'clock this afternoon W. A. Blagg wa sstill adressing the jury in the state's opening argument. G. P. Wright, prosecuting attorney, was of the opinion that a night session would be held, as the court had not limited the attorneys in their arguments.

The opening arguments before the jury in the murder case of Thomas Ashbrook, charged with murder in the first degree, for the killing of Dewey Leonard March 2 at Leonard's home in Burlington Junction, commenced at 2:35 o'clock this afternoon. W. A. Blagg, assisting the state, opened the arguments.

He began his address after Judge John M. Dawson, presiding, had given his instructions to the jury, which gave them the privilege of finding for first degree murder, second degree murder, manslaughter, or acquittal.

If the jury finds that Ashbrook with malice aforethought, with intent premeditated, took the life of Leonard, they will assess his punishment at death or life imprisonment, according to the instructions.

Can Consider Second Degree.

If they do not find him guilty of this count, they can consider murder in the second degree, for which they shall assess his punishment at not less than ten years. They must find that Ashbrook wilfully shot Leonard, but not with deliberation, the instruction of the court said.

Should the jury find that Ashbrook is not guilty of either first or second degree murder they may consider manslaughter, which is not an excusable homicide, but find the shooting was done without malice or premeditation. The punishment in this case may be two to ten years in the penitentiary; six months to a year in the county jail, or a fine of $500 or both; two months to twelve months in the county jail, a fine of $100, or both.

To find Ashbrook guilty of manslaughter the jury must decide that he did the shooting while in the heat of passion.

Charge Has No Weight.

Or the jury may find the defendant not guilty and acquit him of the charge. The court told the jury that although the information charges first degree of murder, it is a mere charge and is no evidence of the defendant's guilt.

The largest throng of spectators that has gathered in the circuit court room since the case started Monday was present to hear the court give instructions to the jury and listen to argument of counsel. Ashbrook, who was a neighbor of Leonard's at Burlington Junction, has been in the county jail since March 2, awaiting his trial. Evidence has shown that he shot at Leonard while in the home of the deceased.

Leonard, who was 29 years of age at the time of his death, had worked for Ashbrook on various occasions.

Defense Instructions.

The defense instructions, accepted by the court, asked acquittal of Ashbrook, "because he had reasonable cause to believe he was in danger of bodily harm at the time he shot Leonard."

These instructions further said the jury should first consider the good character of the defendant when they passed on his innocence or guilt. The court instructed the jury that the law presumes the defendant to be innocent of the charge and entitles him to acquittal unless the State overcomes such presumption by proving him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, over the plea of the defendant that the act was done in self defense.

The jury was instructed that if at the time the defendant shot the deceased he had reasonable cause to apprehend a design on the part of the deceased to take his life or do him great personal injury and thus reasonable cause for him to apprehend immediate danger, then the shooting was justifiable and the jury should look at the transaction of the defendant and un-

TEN IN FINAL DECLAMATION

TWO NODAWAY COUNTAINS STILL IN RACE.

MARYVILLE IN DEBATE

Lock Springs Meets Local Team At 4 O'Clock Today To Decide Championship.

Four boys and six girls will compete tomorrow morning in the finals of oration and declamation, always a popular division of the State Teachers College contests for high schools of Northwest Missouri.

The four boys and six girls qualified at preliminary trials held this morning, with twenty-one contestants in oration and thirty-three in declamation.

In the early years of the annual spring contests, the oration and declamation events were one of the main features, and a full evening was devoted to them. This year, however, the finals have been relegated to a morning position.

County Represented.

Nodaway County will have one representative in each of the finals, as Stanley Gex of Graham high school qualified in oration and Mildred Medsker of Guilford was one of the girls who survived the preliminaries. Gex will give "The New South," and Miss Medsker will read "Afterwards."

Other finalists in oration are E. Whipple of Fortescue, "The Call to Arms"; Maynard Sanders, Gallatin, "The New South"; and C. Denny, New Hampton, "A Vision of War."

The other declamation finalists are Elizabeth Swisher, Civil Bend, "Humoresque"; Norma Staloup, Oregon, "Mon Pierre"; Charlotte Catt, Tarkio, "Who's Afraid"; DeLana Woltz, Gilman City, "Billy Brad and the Big Lie"; and Emily Walker, Plattsburg, "Courage."

Speaking Finals Today.

Finals in extemporaneous speaking were held this afternoon, after preliminaries this morning. The winner will be announced at the music finals tonight.

The debating championship of the College district also was being decided this afternoon, with Maryville and Lock Springs as the finalists. The debate was held in the College auditorium at 4 o'clock, while the finals in extempore were held at the same hour in the former library at the College.

Chinese Question Popular.

The Chinese situation with especial regard to the attitude of Chinese toward foreigners was a popular subject with the extemporaneous speakers. Three of the winners spoke on this subject and the other on prospective candidates for the next presidential election. The preliminary winners are James Wilson of Bethany, Floyd McCommas of Cameron, Lorene Galbreath of Savannah and Lucian Frank of King City.

"The New South" was the popular subject in the oration contests. Two of the winners in the preliminaries spoke on this subject and it was given by a number of the losers.

Six Short Stories Entered.

Six entries in the short story contest were submitted and the winner will

HAMILTON IS PLAY WINNER

MARYVILLE TAKES SECOND AND COFFEY THIRD.

BIG AUDIENCE ATTENDS

In Tableau, Maryville Wins Cup, With Gower Second.—Competition Keen, Settings Excellent.

Hamilton high school, presenting "Poor Madelina," won last night the silver cup given annually to the winner in dramatics in the State Teachers College contests for high schools of Northwest Missouri. Maryville was placed second and Coffey third.

The three plays, together with two tableaux, were given in the College auditorium before a near-capacity audience.

In the picture study tableau, the silver cup went to Maryville high school, on its representation, "Feeding the Birds," from the celebrated painting by the French artist, Millet. Those who took part were Mary Henderson, Virginia Miller and Nellie Russell. The background was painted by Junior Curnutt, and Mrs. Virgil Rathbun was the director. Music on the violin during the pose was played by Beatrice Hansen, and Virginia Braun gave an introduction describing the work of Millet.

Gower had the only other entry in tableaux and took second with an excellent reproduction of "The Broken Pitcher," by Greur.

The rivalry in dramatics always has been keen in the annual contests here, and this year proved no exception. Opinions among the audience varied widely as to the best of the three plays which survived the afternoon preliminaries.

Hamilton, the winner, had the most difficult place on the evening's program, following the two tableaux and the other two plays. A storm was threatened and the audience was restless. The Hamilton representatives proceeded undisturbed in the fantasy by Louise Saunders which occupied three scenes. The play depicted the land of fantasy, where happiness reigned, changed to the world of hard knocks, then returned to the original setting where love was redeemed.

Lucille Mitchell, Mary K. McAdoo and Kenneth Kincaid composed the cast of "Poor Madelina." Miss Myrle Hankins, a former State Teachers College student, directed the winning play. All settings last night were especially attractive.

Maryville's second-place play was "The Vanishing Princess," by John Golden. The action centered about a novelty shop. It was a story of "pay your rent or get out;" with a good Samaritan who appeared in time to fall in love with the girl of the shop and provided money in great abundance.

In the Maryville cast were Paul Bratcher, Marzella Clary, Wilson Dowden, Carl Fisher, Frank Fisher, Ruth Kramer, Earl Somerville, Laura Warner, Catherine Wray and Florence Wray. Miss Anna R. Crane directed the Maryville play.

Exceptionally popular with the audience was the play rated third by the judge. "The Valiant," b Hall and Middlemass, presented by the Coffey school. The emotional acting of Frances Gotschall as the girl in this play was outstanding. Paul Martin, as a convict waiting for the hour of his execution, also was thoroughly satisfactory.

Miss Gotschall, in the scene in which she sought to identify the prisoner as a missing brother, succeeded in bringing tears to the eyes of many persons in her audience. Again there was a complete hush in the scene in which the warden and priest prepared the prisoner for his march to the execution room. The curtain was drawn as the trio marched through the door of the death chamber.

Others in the Coffey cast were Paul Thompson, Kermit Everly, Glenn Knott, and Richard Welden. The director was Harry McKory.

Miss Shelton Wilhite, of Westport High School, Kansas City, was the the judge of the plays.

Odd Fellows Hold Meeting at Wilcox

C. E. Ashford presided at the meeting. The first, second and third degrees were conferred upon Don E. Smith by the Barnard and other teams. Nearly every lodge in the county was present. The Rebekahs served the supper. The next meeting place will be Hopkins in three months.

Graham won first prize for the best degree work. Barnard was awarded second prize in degree work.

Barnard won first in largest delegation present. About fifty members from Barnard attended.

GIRLS' TRACK MEET CLOSE

PLATTSBURG HAS HALF POINT LEAD OVER PRINCETON.

THREE RECORDS FALL

One Other Is Tied, When Afternoon Is Yet Young.—One Girl Contestant Injured.

With the girls track meet two-thirds over at the College this afternoon, Plattsburg was leading Princeton for point honors, 15 to 14½. Savannah was in third place with 7 points.

Three records had been broken and another tied.

Meet Late In Starting.

The girls' meet was late in starting, the first event not getting underway until 2 o'clock. Despite the fact that the track was in such condition that all of the events had to be run on the grass in the quarter stretch, a happy-go-lucky crowd of several hundred persons populated the north stands and everything was in ship-shape order when Paul Jones sent the finalists down the grass lanes on the 60-yard dash.

Contestants and coaches assembled in groups in different parts of the field. The preliminaries in both dashes and the hurdle race this morning eliminated some of the confusion which usually attends the girls' meet and events were slated to run off on near-schedule time.

The 60-yard dash was won by B. O'Conner of Plattsburg in 7.6 seconds. She was closely trailed by M. Lambert of Princeton, second, and D. Shaw of Savannah, third. Fourth place went to A. Irwin of Helena.

A Record Shattered.

P. Stanley, of Princeton, in one of her trial throws in the basketball throw contest, shattered the old record of 72

Announcements Tonight.

Final contests in boys quartet, girls' quartet, piano solo, violin solo, and cornet solo were held this morning. The judges decisions have been made but there will be no announcement of the awards until tonight.

The number of entries in piano solo was very large this year, totaling seventeen. In violin solo there were ten contestants and there were eight representatives in the cornet solo contest.

Thirteen different schools were represented in the boys' quartet and sixteen schools reported for competition in the girls' quartet. The compositions rendered by the various contestants were of a high calibre and it was very difficult for the listeners to choose any number better than another.

A Latin Exhibition.

Contests in French, Latin, Social Science, and Mathematics were in progress today. In all of these contests examinations were required, and the contestants spent the major part of the morning on their papers. In the Latin contests a poster for the elementary students and a booklet for the advanced students were required. These were prepared in advance, and will be exhibited today and tomorrow in the Latin room at the College.

Results on the above contests will be tabulated by late this afternoon, and the awards will be made tonight.

Food contests and bed making contests, held yesterday, have been judged, and the awards for these will also be made following the program tonight. The judges are still working on the grain judging contest, and it is doubtful if any announcement can be made as to winners before tomorrow at the earliest. C. H. Withington, in charge of this contest, said that it might be that no decision could be made public until the first of next week.

Mrs. Lloyd Heifner of Maryville and Mrs. Dean Campbell of Barnard, who have been visiting in Kansas City with Mrs. Campbell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Redl, will remain over for the funeral.

Mr. Westerbeck installed the first electric light plant at Barnard several years ago.

New York Peaceful in Naval Invasion

U. S. Fleet of 122 Warships Sails Up Hudson, Giving Gotham a Thrill.

New York, April 29.—New York today stood by unresisting in the face of its greatest naval invasion.

A fleet of 122 warships, made up of the majority of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets, appeared out of the early morning fog and sailed in a long, gray line up the Hudson and East rivers, where the men-of-war anchored. A few of the vessels were dispatched to the Brooklyn navy ward.

It was the largest assembly of battle craft ever to appear in the waters surrounding Manhattan island.

The ships brought 29,737 enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps and 2,277 officers.

ST. LOUISAN TO TRY ALANTIC

AVIATOR CHARLES LINDBERGH TO ATTEMPT LONG FLIGHT.

ACOSTA OUT OF RACE

Co-Holder of Plane Endurance Record Gives Way to Partner Who Weighs Less.

San Diego, Cal., April 29.—Captain Charles Lindbergh, St. Louis aviator, will hop off in his giant Ryan monoplane for the East tomorrow, ready to attempt a flight from New York to Paris.

His plane, built during the last two months, amazed even its designers in test flights here yesterday.

From here Lindbergh plans to fly to St. Louis, remaining in the air overnight and arriving there Sunday. After christening ceremonies for his plane in St. Louis, he plans to take off for New York Tuesday.

At New York the engines will be tuned up and by the end of the week Lindbergh believes he will be ready to take off on the trans-Atlantic hop.

Acosta Too Fat.

New York, April 29.—Sixty pounds of fat today stood between Bert Acosta, veteran air mail pilot, and a chance at lasting fame in a New York-to-Paris non-stop flight.

The extra sixty pounds might mean the difference between success and failure in the flight.

The chunky Acosta has withdrawn as a candidate for the honor of piloting the Bellanca monoplane on its first attempt to span the Atlantic because he weighs sixty pounds more than Clarence Chamberlain, his competitor for the pilot's seat.

Acosta's withdrawal definitely determines that Chamberlain and Lloyd Bertaud, navigator, will be in the little plane when it takes off in a few days for Paris.

Mexico, Mo., April 29.—Loss estimated at nearly $100,000 was caused by fire of undetermined origin which broke out early today in the Grand Theater.

U. S. May Ask Receiver for K. C. Land Bank

Six Officials Must Raise $1,400,000 Within Next Three Days for Security, Bond and Interest.

Kansas City, Mo., April 29.—Unless six officials of the Kansas City joint stock land bank raise $1,400,000 within the next three days, the federal farm loan board probably will ask a receiver for the institution, government agents who are conducting the prosecution of the indicted bankers indicated today.

The farm loan board has demanded $600,000 additional securities on the bank's bond issue, it was said, and $800,000 in coupons interest on the bonds is due May 1.

Maryville Girls Win Volley Ball Contest

BLOW LEVEE TO SAVE CITY

HOUSES TREMBLE, THEN TOPPLED INTO SWIRLING WATERS.

BREAK 1500 FEET WIDE

Nine Planes To Arkansas; Order Mobilization Of Coast Guards; 4 More Counties Threatened.

Memphis, Aprii 29.—The goal of the American Red Cross flood relief fund may be increased from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000, it was announced today by Henry M. Baker, national chairman of disaster relief.

(Copyright by United Press).

Aboard the Coast Guard Cutter 302, off Poydras, La., April 29.—With a mighty blast which sent dirt flying a hundred feet into the air, accompanied by a roar as the Mississippi river leaped to freedom, engineers blew the levee, fourteen miles south of New Orleans, today in a desperate effort to save the city and other parts of the state from the worst flood threat in history.

Houses in the path of the torrent trembled and then topled into a scene of utter desolation. Garden spots were quickly covered from the backwater of the main stream, and peaceful farming communities were inundated.

A break was made which widened out to about 1,500 feet as the relieved flood waters swirled and twisted through the gap and started on a path of destruction across St. Bernard Parish, which has been sacrificed to appease the Mississippi river's wrath against New Orleans and other parts of the state.

Two More Ramparts Break.

Vicksburg, Miss., April 29.—Two more ramparts have given way before the assault of flood waters, it was announced here this afternoon at the office of the United States government engineers.

Nine Planes to Arkansas.

San Antonio, April 29.—Nine army airplanes from Kelly and Brooks fields today were ordered to proceed to Little Rock, Ark., to aid in flood relief work.

Arkansas national guardsmen will pilot four of the planes from Brooks field.

The planes will be used to carry physicians, relief workers and supplies to flood sufferers in the Mississippi valley.

Coast Guard to Mobilize.

Washington, April 29.—Admiral F. C. Billard, commandant of the Coast Guard, today ordered a general mobilization of available Coast Guard units on the Great Lakes, the Gulf and Mississippi valley for flood relief.

Four Counties Threatened.

Little Rock, April 29.—National guardsmen and farmers were piling 4,000 sandbags per hour against the Arkansas river levee near South Bend this afternoon with scant hopes of saving four counties form a disasterous overflow.

The weak spot in the levee developed early today only a mile south of the place where guardsmen and convicts fought day and night last week to avert an overflow.

To Survey Crop Damage.

Washington, April 29.—Department of Agriculture estimators in the flooded Mississippi valley states have been instructed by the crop reporting board here to meet in Memphis early next week to survey crop damage done by the flood.

Engineers' Alarm Grows.

Memphis, April 29.—The Red Cross flood relief organization today continued concentrating rescue boats on the Mississippi river, south of Natchez, Miss., in readiness for any emergency.

Reports from government engineers stationed along the river today showed their increasing alarm over flood conditions in Mississippi, southeastern Arkansas and Louisiana.

Weather

Unsettled today with showers and local thunderstorms in east and south portion; cooler; mostly fair Saturday.

Prominent Attorney of Savannah Dies

I. R. Williams, Member Of Booher And Williams Firm, Well Known In Nodaway County.

I. R. Williams, 75 years old, long a resident of Savannah, died at the Missouri Methodist Hospital in St. Joseph on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at the Savannah Christian Church and the services will be conducted by the Rev. C. M. Chilton of St. Joseph.

Mr. Williams was well known in Nodaway County. He was a member of the board of regents of the State Teachers College here several years ago and frequently was here in connection with work on that board as well as on law business. He was one of the pioneer attorneys of Andrew County and Northwest Missouri. He has been in active practice since 1874. Mr. Williams formed a partnership with the late Charles F. Booher, who was the representative in congress from this district for many years. This firm, known as Booher & Williams, has existed forty-one years and will continue in the old firm name.

Mr. Williams was mayor of Savannah for twenty-six consecutive years and was diligent in promoting the best interests of the town for many years. He has one brother, Judge Thomas D. Fifteen Outfits, White With Small Blue Stripe, Expected Here For Opening Game, May 8.

Fifteen suits for the Maryville baseball club were ordered last night through "Iky" Eads, a former State Teachers College student, now a salesman for a sporting goods company.

Selection of members of the Maryville Club will be made Monday, when a list of eighteen players will be named from the twenty-five or thirty aspirants. The club will be trimmed to fifteen members by June.

Sale of season tickets was started this week and the canvassers reported good success the first time out.

Harold Daniels Wins in Representation, Junior Curnutt in Costume Design—A Harmony Poster Third.

Honors in fine arts contests yesterday went to Maryville High School students, with Junior Curnutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Z. Curnutt, and Harold Daniels, son of Mrs. Anna Daniels, as the victorious contestants. Young Daniels won first place and a gold medal in the representation contest, while Curnutt won his gold medal in the costume design contest.

Honors in two contests went to representatives of Benton High School in St. Joseph. This school had the only high school annual entered in that contest—the Wahwahlenawah—and captured a trophy cup without competition. In the poster contest first and second places went to Benton entries, while third place was awarded to Donald Neal of Harmony.

The Benton posters by Nadine Vincil and George Dupin, were in colors. Both had milk drinking as their subject. One was a take-off on the old woman who lived in a shoe, while the other was of a house with healthy children, where milk was a portion of the daily diet. Posters by Junior Curnutt and Cairl Reimer, St. Patrick's school, failed to place.

Neal had a drawing of the College, well done in every respect. Miss Shelton Wilhite, art teacher at Westport High School, Kansas City, was the judge of all the fine arts contests.

Rain of Last Night Measures .95 Inch

After a sultry day, heavy black clouds rolled up about 10:30 o'clock last night, and with sharp thunder reports and heavy wind, a deluge of rain fell. The precipitation was measured at .95 of an inch by J. R. Brink, official weather observer.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Simmons and family, Parnell; and C. H. Walker and family, Barnard, were Maryville visitors today.

feet 2 inches when she hurled the ball 91 feet 9 inches. On her first throw in the event, Miss Stanley tossed the pellet 82 feet.

H. Frank Lawrence, director of athletics, at the College officiated as chief timer for the meet. He was assisted by E. H. Shields, C. V. Ford, H. S. Holt, Melvin Akars, and Leo B. Knox were judges of the finish. Forrest Froman was clerk of the course. A number of the men students of the College assisted as measurers in the field events. Gordon Joy, captain of the Bearcat basketball team and javelin thrower on the College track team, was custodian of the awards. Medals were given to first and second place winners after each event.

Miss O'Connor—Bernadine being the first name—continued her successful sprinting when she won the 75-yard dash in 9.5 seconds. The Plattsburg girl was merely repeating history when she won the two dashes, since it was she who captured the 60 and 75 in last year's meet.

Miss Stanley bettered her preliminary mark in the finals of the basketball throw when she threw the ball 92 feet 4½ inches for a still newer record. M. Lambert won her third silver medal of the meet when she placed second to her team-mate in the basketball throw.

With three events of the afternoon completed, the meet seemed to be developing into a race between Plattsburg and Princeton for honors. The former had ten points, secured by firsts in the two dashes, while Princeton, with seconds in three events and first in one had fourteen points. Savannah was third in the meet with five points, and Darlington and Helena enjoyed two points each.

Marian Lambert of Princeton and Bernadine O'Connor of Plattsburg were the mainstays of their teams, the latter leading by one point for individual honors at the completion of three events. The meet was one-third over at this time.

Gets Third Gold Medal.

Miss O'Connor, recalling to the fans memories of the time when Bob Simpson carried away honors in a boys' meet here years ago, won her third gold medal when she tied the meet record in the low hurdle event at 12 seconds. Harrold of Coffey was second in this event, Stuart of Daleview was third, and F. Harrington of Coffey was fourth.

The broad jump resulted in a victory for Goolsby of Foresecue, who jumped 13 feet 9½ inches. Second place went to Irwin of Helena, Howard of Weston was third, and Stanley of Princeton and Hall of Savannah were tied for fourth.

Helena Girl Injured.

L. Rogers of Helena was carried from the field at 3 o'clock, suffering from a wrenched knee, sustained in the high jump. She was taken to a doctor for treatment. This was the first injury of any kind during the meet.

Pauline Stanley broke her second record of the day when she threw the baseball 189 feet. The previous record, made by G. Howard of Weston in 1926, was three feet less. Miss Howard also took part in the event today. There was a great contrast between the girl who broke the record and the one who had previously held it. The former is a tall, heavily built girl, while the Weston girl is short and slender.

The performance of Miss Stanley and Miss Lambert was outstanding. They were the only entries from Princeton, but in the events in which they were entered they made a remarkable showing.

The record in the high jump was broken by one-fourth of an inch when West of Altamont and Carroll of Grant City tied for first at 4 feet 5¼ inches. There was a four-way tie for third place between Stewart of Daleview, Fattig of Grant City, Hall of Savannah, and Brownlee of Savannah. Points were divided for first place and Carroll won the flip for gold medal.

Maryville Eliminated in Tennis Singles

Hopkins Entrant Defeats Opponent From Cameron—In Doubles St. Joseph Beaten by Bethany.

Savannah defeated Maryville in the semi-finals of the girls' doubles tennis matches this afternoon at the College 7-5, 6-4. St. Joseph Central defeated the Tarkio girls 6-3, 9-7. Savannah will play St. Joseph late this afternoon for the doubles championship.

In the girls' singles tennis matches St. Joseph Central defeated Tarkio 6-3, 6-3 and Chillicothe defeated Graham 2-6, 6-1, 6-3. These were semi-final games. Chillicothe and St. Joseph were playing at 3:30 p. m. for the girls' singles championship.

In the boys' singles of the second round Bethany was eliminated by Rock Port 6-0, 6-0, while St. Joseph Central defeated Laredo 6-3, 6-3. The Blythedale doubles team advanced when Excelsior Springs forfeited, while Graham defeated the Maryville entrant 6-2, 6-0 in the doubles tennis matches.

Tarkio defeated Savannah in the boys doubles 6-3, 6-0. Bethany defeated Chillicothe 6-3, 6-2 in the boys doubles matches. Hopkins and Blythedale were playing the doubles late this afternoon.

Rock Port defeated Ridgeway in the second round of the boys tennis singles by a score of 7-5, 6-2.

The annual tennis tournament held at the College every spring for high schools, got under way at 9 o'clock this morning.

In the men's singles Cameron played Hopkins in the first match. Last year the same two entrants played each other and the Cameron player came out on top but this year the "worm turned."

Sayler of Hopkins defeated his tall, red-haired opponent, 6-1 and 6-4.

Chillicothe was paired against Tarkio; Savannah drew a bye; Graham, Laredo, and Ridgeway also drew byes. Bethany was placed against Rock Port and St. Joseph Central High defeated the Maryville High entrant 6-0 and 6-1.

In the men's doubles only two matches have been played so far: Bethany defeated St. Joseph Central 6-1 and 6-4; and Tarkio won from Skidmore 6-3 and 6-1.

In the girls' singles the St. Joseph Central entrant won from the Tarkio player 6-3, 6-3. Graham was playing Chillicothe.

In the girls' doubles St. Joseph Central and Tarkio were having a merry tussle, with the advantage on the Central side. Maryville is scheduled to play Savannah.

Rock Port Winner in Industrial Arts

Junior Curnutt, Maryville, Best in Mechanical Drawing—Harold Daniels Second in Woodwork.

The final announcement of the winners in woodwork, Class A and B, and mechanical drawing was given at the College last night by A. H. Wasser of the industrial arts department, Pittsburg, Kan. State Teachers College, who was judge of the work sent by five different schools.

The display was a varied and interesting one and Mr. Wasser said that it was difficult to choose a winner from so many different pieces of excellent high school work. Junior Curnutt, Maryville, won the only prize offered in mechanical drawing, a 24-inch T-square with transparent ambro-lined blade.

In Class A woodwork, a Rock Port student won first with a turned floor lamp, a piece of work that was almost perfect in detail.

Second place went to Harold Daniels of Maryville, who had a book rack as his project.

In Class B woodwork, Jamesport took both first and second places, first honor being given to a footstool and second place to a candlestick.

The entries, according to U. G. Whiffen, manual arts teacher at the College, were larger and better this year than ever before and he is well satisfied with the representative work of the various high schools.

An interesting piece of work, for display only, was brought to Maryville by Mr. Cochran of Bethany. It was an inlaid piece made in 1810, by the great-great-great grandfather of one of his shop boys. It has been preserved in excellent shape.

Another interesting feature of the exhibit was the two model sailing ships, presented by two Maryville students.

The plans for the ships had been worked out in minute detail and were very interesting and artful creations, but were not given places on account of the impracticability of the model ships as an industrial arts project.

Mrs. Snyder to Stand in Her Own Defense

Murder Defendant Tells of Marital Difficulties—Admits Unfaithfulness With Gray.

Long Island City, April 29. — Ruth Brown Snyder, charged with Henry Judd Gray with the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder, began testimony in her own defense this afternoon.

Mrs. Snyder was called to the stand before a courtroom jammed with a thousand people, who packed the aisle, so closely attendants could hardly move about.

"You are to understand," said Justice Scudder, "that you are not compelled to testify, since you are a defendant."

"On the advice of counsel," Attorney Hazelton, broke in, "this witness will testify on her own behalf."

She recited various secretarial positions she had held.

"How long did you know your husband before you married him," asked Hazelton.

"About three or four months."

When Lorraine, her daughter, was born nine years ago the witness said, she was forced to undergo an operation. Arrival of the child did not serve to stop family bickerings that had developed.

"Did you quarrel often?" inquired Hazelton.

"More and more often," nodded the witness.

Mrs. Snyder hesitated at the mention of her daughter and then suddenly bowed her head, covered her face with her hands and began sobbing. In a minute, however, she regained her composure.

"You were unfaithful to your marriage vows after you met Henry Judd Gray?" she was asked.

"I was," said Mrs. Snyder.

"Did any other man, except your husband, ever know you carnally?"

"No."

Harve Knobbs and Miss Vannie Knobbs of Guilford were Maryville visitors yesterday.

What Nodaway County Churches Are Doing

THE LOOK THAT SAVED PETER

Comment on the Uniform International Sunday School Lesson for May 1, 1927. Read Mark 14; Luke 22.

Wm. Southern, Jr.

A public speaker describing a certain fiasco used this phrase "The affair just petered out."

He probably did not know that he was using a phrase derived from one of the most dramatic scenes described in the New Testament. When Peter failed his Master, when he stood warming his hands over the brazier in the court of the High Priest before whom Jesus was being arraigned and was accused of the following of the prisoner, Peter fell from his high estate as a leading disciple and denied his Master. When we say anything just peters out the expression comes from this action of Peter.

When Jesus called to Peter as he was in his boat getting ready to go fishing, and Peter responded and joined the Master and became a Christian, he was an apprentice Christian. His heart had responded to the call but he did not know much about it. He had confidence in Jesus and followed him. His education began at that moment.

When the same Peter had finished his education under Jesus and had witnessed his arrest and followed him into the inner court in sight of the high priest he denied the Lord. Then he received his LLD. or whatever degree it might have been called at that time. It was conferred by Jesus when he turned and looked upon Peter and when Peter went out and wept bitterly.

The sudden and bitter repentance was a part of the test. The look did it. It pierced Peter to the heart, it broke down all his stubbornness, which had lasted until just a moment before. Lasted even when for a third time they that stood by said, "Of truth thou art one of them," and Peter had said, "Hell, No. I do not even know the man of whom you speak." Then that look. It was not until then that Simon became Peter, the Rock. Never again did Peter hesitate. This final experience carried him through a long life and to the death of a martyr. Never again did he falter. Never again did he deny his Lord. He became from that moment a graduate Christian.

Peter was not a bad man. He was impulsive. He as a man of direct action. He needed a lot of training. He needed just the lesson he got. I imagine that Peter, never as long as he lived, forgot that look, that when he would awaken in the night he would see the look of his Lord, a look of forgiveness, a look of trust, a look of love. I think that look was never out of Peter's mind. Whenever he was tempted to swear, whenever he was facing impatience, whenever he faced death, as he did many times thereafter, Peter saw that look of his Lord.

I am not trying to excuse Peter. It was an awful thing which he did, to double-cross the man who had been his closest friend for two years, the one whom he had declared to be the Son of God. Look for a moment at Peter's side. It was not until the death of Jesus that the disciples saw clearly that His mission was spiritual, not material. Not until His death did they give up the idea of a temporal kingdom. Peter had followed Jesus, had lived close to Him. He was present when the arrest was made just a few hours before the incident of the inner court and had attempted to fight and had been rebuked. There he was, his hopes all flown, his Master a helpless prisoner with no signs of Kingship, his world had tumbled about him in ruins. Peter was not only hopeless, but beginning to wonder if he had not been wrong in following this man. Why should he acknowledge a failure. I have known men well whom I would have liked to deny, men I did not want to know longer.

But when Peter caught that look all his doubts vanished and he saw himself for what he was. Then came swift repentance and tears.

We do not easily forgive a man who fails at a crucial moment. An old saying is "Stand up to the rack, fodder or no fodder." We like to see a man stick to his guns even in the face of defeat and go down with flags flying and we honor such a man. So we rather take on a superior tone when we talk about Peter and intimate that in the same position we would not have denied Jesus.

Where was James? Where were the other disciples? They had fled except John and Peter. They were not even close enough to be accused.

There is a saying in sportdom "They never come back." Peter came back and how gloriously he came back. And that look did it. Had Jesus looked angrily at him, had he pointed at Peter the finger of scorn, had his lips form the words, "I told you so," it would have hardened Peter's heart and we would never have heard of him again. It is what we would have done. I think I could not have resisted the temptation to say "I told you so." I have found very few men or women who could resist such an opportunity.

The last of the story is not that Peter found and denied his Lord. The heart of the story is that Peter repented, that his repentance stuck. A little girl in Sunday School was asked what it is necessary before repentance and she said "sin." Peter had sinned. Peter repented.

As long as a man or woman can repent and weep heart tears in sorrow and repentance for what they have done the way to Jesus is an open path. Jesus is ready to send their wayward look of love and trust and forgiveness which he sent that night on the heads of those about him to-day.

We have seen men in high position who betrayed their trust and who have been found out and exposed. We have seen the courts of the land solemnly declare them guilty or betraying a solemn trust or duty. Does it bother them? Do they suffer, do they go sleepless at night, do they repent in bitter tears?

I can answer for these men. I am inclined to think that there are men who gain great riches and power by sharp practice and persuade themselves that it is all right if they can get away with it. They persuade themselves it is no crime, because all about them others are doing the same thing. But I think they get another viewpoint when they are found out. That they shrink and dodge and run away when the black headlines blaze across the front pages of the papers announcing their crime. I think they suddenly are very much astonished at the way the people look at their acts and that never again will the wealth left to them give them a moment of pleasure.

Happy Peter who could read forgiveness in a look and then weep bitterly. Happy Peter who was given a long life in which to make amends. We do not despise Peter now because of his betrayal. We love him because of his repentance and his life of great service which he gave willingly and unreservedly ever after.

PETER'S DENIAL AND REPENTANCE.

Mark 14: 53, 54, 66-71; Luke 22: 61, 62.

Mark 14: 53 And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and there came together with him all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes.

54. And Peter had followed him afar off, even within, into the court of the high priest; and he was sitting with the officers, and warming himself in the light of the fire.

66. And as Peter was beneath in the court, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest;

67. and seeing Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and saith, Thou also wast with the Nazarene, even Jesus.

68. But he denied, saying, I neither know, nor understand what thou sayest, and he went out into the porch; and the cock crew.

69. And the maid saw him, and began again to say to them that stood by, This is one of them.

70. But he again denied it. And after a little while again they that stood by said to Peter, Of a truth thou art one of them; for thou art a Galilean.

71. But he began to curse and to swear, I know not this man of whom you speak.

Luke 22: 61. And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how that he said unto him, Before the cock crow this day thou shalt deny me thrice.

62. And he went out, and wept bitterly.

Dry Officers Break Up Pacific Rum Trade

Campaign by Government Proves Effective Against Smuggling of Liquor on West Coast.

Washington, April 29.—Rum running on the Pacific coast from Canada has virtually been broken up by prohibition investigators and the Coast Guard, it was learned at the Treasury today.

The government campaign against liquor smuggling on the Pacific has been so effective that representatives of the Consolidated Exporters Exchange of Vancouver made an order to the Treasury to end its rum running operations, provided prosecution against members of the concern caught bringing liquor into the United States were dropped.

There are so many sides now to every political question, and so many shades of opinion in every party, that a simple, old-fashioned partisan patriot doesn't know where he's at.

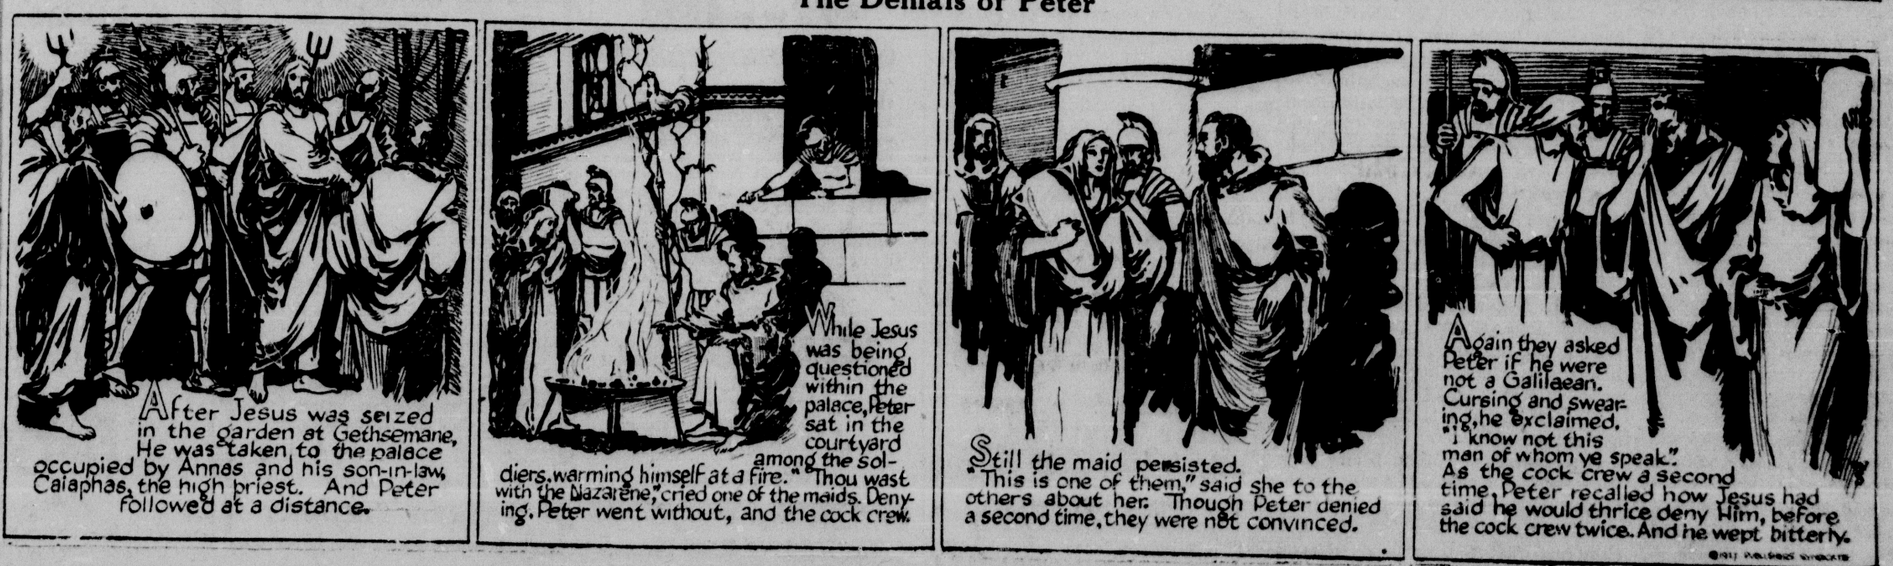
DRAMATIC EVENTS IN BIBLE HISTORY : : By Harlowe R. Hoyt and Walter Scott

The Denials of Peter



After Jesus was seized in the garden at Gethsemane, He was taken to the palace occupied by Annas and his son-in-law, Caiaphas, the high priest. And Peter followed at a distance.
While Jesus was being questioned within the palace, Peter sat in the courtyard among the soldiers, warming himself at a fire. "Thou wast with the Nazarene," cried one of the maids. Denying, Peter went without, and the cock crew.
Still the maid persisted. "This is one of them," said she to the others about her. Though Peter denied a second time, they were not convinced.
Again they asked Peter if he were not a Galilaean. Cursing and swearing, he exclaimed, "I know not this man of whom ye speak." As the cock crew a second time, Peter recalled how Jesus had said he would thrice deny Him, before the cock crew twice. And he wept bitterly.

DAUGHTERS of MIDAS

THIS HAS HAPPENED

T. Q. Curtis stages two intriguing contests in his big department store and, strangely the winners are the prettiest girls in the store—BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX, WINNIE SHELTON, and others.

The prize for the second contest is an invitation to a big formal dinner party at the Curtis mansion and an evening dress and slippers for each girl for the occasion. Billy suspects that old Curtis has a motive behind his actions and generosity. These suspicions are heightened when CLAY CURTIS, son of the store owner, beggs Billy to have nothing to do with the contests.

Clay has disinherited himself and is now living with the Wells family in a poor section of the city, working in a factory by day and writing music at night. The friendship between Clay and Billy is founded on their mutual love of music. Billy hopes some day to be a great violinist.

The day Billy learns she is a winner in the second contest, a customer comes to her counter who enthralls her with his Oriental looks, his somber eyes and intimate smile. When she announces to Clay and her mother the prize she has won, Clay begs her not to accept the invitation to dinner. In the end, he proposes marriage to Billy, saying he is willing to give up his ambitions to make his own way and return to his father, so that he may have unlimited money to spend on Billy's musical education.

Billy refuses, for his sake, although she believes she loves him. At the dinner at the Curtis home, Billy Sees DAL ROMAINE again, the dark, mysterious stranger with hypnotic eyes, whom she had first met at the glove counter. She is completely under Romaine's spell and resents bitterly when Nyda Lomax takes his attention away from her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 17

"You are angry with me about something," Dal Romaine's low, rich voice challenged Billy a few minutes later, after she had sat speechless and tormented through the meat course. She had hardly tasted her food, though she had looked forward to the feast all day. "You have gone so far away that I can't find you. Where are you, Billy Wells?"

She wanted to hurl ugly words at him — faker, poseur, bunko-artist—but when his eyes drew hers her anger and contempt ebbed away. She was conscious of only one thought—that he had missed her, in her withdrawing, had willed her to come back to him.

"You were believing that I had told Miss Lomax just what I had been saying to you," he went on, in words so low that they could reach no other ears than hers.

"You're a mind-reader, as well as a fortune-teller?" Billy retorted with something like her old impudence.

"It is not hard to read your mind—it is such an honest, open mind. As a matter of fact, I can read minds rather well. Minds of people who vibrate with me, if you understand—and I think you do."

"I know very little of the metaphysical and occult world." Billy shrugged, but she could not lower her eyes to turn to her food as if the subject did not interest her.

"You do not have to know—you feel," he told her. "You are an old soul; into a crass, middle-western civilization you have been born for perhaps a last reincarnation, as a musical genius. I knew—as soon as we met—that we were on the same plane—"

"And did you say that to Nyda, too? It's a great line. And it's new in Coltax, or at least, in department store circles. It should be very successful." There was a bitter twist to her lips, but it was the bitterness of pain.

"Miss Lomax asked me if I wasn't some sort of foreigner, and I told her, in a word, that I had gypsy blood in my veins. One cannot refuse to answer a question. But we must not quarrel, Billy Wells."

When he turned to her again, she was happy in a painful, over-excited way, but she said little, just enough to keep him from Nyda. At last the seven courses of T. Q.'s elaborate dinner had been served and eaten. Mrs. Meadows rose, the girls followed her, drifting into little groups, giggling and comparing notes, while the men sat on for a smoke with the host.

"Oh, Billy!" Leila Sampson seized her chum as the party drifted into the drawing room. "I used the wrong fork somewhere along the line and when I got to the ice cream I didn't have anything left but by coffee spoon to eat it with! I thought I'd die when Mrs. Meadows told the waiter to bring me an ice cream fork. I wish I hadn't come! I feel awful in this dress."

"You look lovely," Billy whispered soothingly. "Oh, hello, Nyda! Yes, I'll go up with you. I'd like to renovate my complexion, too. Coming, Winnie?"

The four girls went up the wide staircase. A bedroom at the head of the stairs had been turned into a cloak-and-dressing room, and a white-capped maid was on duty to serve them.

"This rose wabbles." Nyda spoke with natural irritation, her seductive drawl laid aside until it was needed. "A needle and black thread, please," she demanded haughtily of the maid. "Not going to let her Ritz me, because we work in the store," she whispered to Billy. "Oh, say, what do you think of the sheik? He gave me the shivers with those eyes of his. I believe he's a hypnotist, and I told him so, too."

"He's certainly—unusual." Billy answered indifferently, as she sat down before the mirror. "Good heavens! T. Q. must have looted the cosmetics department. He's got everything here, from twenty-dollar-an-ounce perfume to mascara."

"He told me to have everything necessary sent up—and I did," Nyda laughed. "Winnie, you're certainly bagged the prize bachelor. You sure got in your work quick on Ralph Truman."

"I'll trade him to you for Dalhart Romaine," Winnie smiled. "He's the most fascinating thing I ever saw. Ralph and I thought he was going to kiss your ear any minute, but when he was talking to Billy, it looked as if he thought she was the only girl in the world. And Billy didn't like it—oh, no! No indeed. Clay Curtis had better come home and get on his own sheik clothes."

"Let's go down," Billy suggested abruptly to Leila Sampson, who had been rubbing her cheeks vigorously with her own soiled powder puff.

At half past nine the vast drawing room and the almost equally vast dining room were thrown together and an orchestra of grinning black boys, armed with all the instruments that modern jazz calls for, had been installed.

Billy's first dance was with Dalhart Romaine. He had been talking with Nyda Lomax when the syncopated strains of the first fox-trot sent out their irresistible invitation, and Billy, watching them with wide, unhappy eyes, had been sure that he would take Nyda into his arms. But he bowed, that abrupt continental bending of the waist, and left Nyda to be disputed over by the other two men in the group that proved Ndya to be one of the belles of the evening. And he came straight to Billy, his dark face still and inscrutable. He held out his arms, as if he knew she had been waiting for him, as if he could not conceive of her wanting to dance first with any other man.

She wanted to tell him that the dance was already taken, but his eyes brooding down upon her, with that serious hint of sadness in them when they were unsmiling, drew her far more potently than the suggestion of his extended arms. They slipped into the dance, and for the first few steps she held herself rigidly, resisting the rapture that ran along every nerve in her body at the light embrace of his arms.

"Don't think so much," he whispered, that odd smile flashing brilliantly over his face.

She sighed once, deeply, then relaxed in his arms, gave herself up utterly to the joy of dancing with a perfect partner. He did not talk, for which she was grateful, but after a round of the drawing room, he willed her to meet his eyes, and he held them unwaveringly until the dance was finished.

Ralph Truman claimed her for the next dance, and his light, nonsensical chatter helped to steady her nerves. She became her impudent, flippant self again, parried his "kidding" skillfully, evaded making a "date" with him, but promised vaguely to go through his father's factory with him some time.

"I want you to see where Clay works," he told her, serious for the moment.

"You forget that I work, too," she reminded him. "This is Cinderella's ball, you know, but it happens that there are nine Cinderellas here tonight.

Twice they passed Dal Romaine, his dark, sleek head bent over tiny Winnie Shelton, an amused smile quirking the corners of his mount. Just before the music stopped, Truman wheeled her out of the drawing room door into the hall, where T. Q. Curtis stood talking with his lawyer, Warburton. In the instant of their intrusion, Billy heard a word flung like the smack of a challenging glove into the face of her employer. "Fool!" Then Warburton saw her and Truman scowled at them, and retreated into the library across the hall, leaving T. Q. with them.

"Having a good time?" he grinned.

"Glorious!" She lifted her arms to him, as the orchestra began to play an encore. "Dance with me just this once, Mr. Curtis. It's a waltz."

They bumped into Dal Romaine, looking for her, and the darkening of his face in disappointment made her absurdly happy.

"Mr. Curtis, who is Mr. Romaine," she asked.

"I've never met him before, my dear, but he's a nephew of Mrs. Meadows. I understand from her that he is in business in New York. I'm not clear just what it is. He seems to have made quite a hit with the girls, doesn't he?" There was a slight edge of contempt on the words which did not escape Billy.

It was five minutes to twelve when the jazz orchestra's saxophone tooted "Tha-a-t's all!" She had had five dances with Romaine, but he had been almost as devoted to Nyda and Winnie, claiming the gorgeous brunet for four dances and the tiny little blond for three.

"Of course I'm taking you home," he told her, holding her bare arm close against his side before releasing her.

But Billy say T. Q.'s quizzical eyes upon her. "No," and she shook her head at Romaine, then released her hand and took three sliding, dancing steps to T. Q.'s side.

"I hope the taxis are waiting," she laughed up at him. "For the magic hour of twelve is about to strike, and this particular Cinderella doesn't want her chariot to turn to a pumpkin. It's been a glorious party, Mr. Curtis. I've never had such a good time in my life before."

"Were you really happy?" he asked, with far more earnestness than the occasion seemed to justify. "What would you say if the hour didn't strike for you at all?"

derstand his surroundings.

"The question to be determined by the jury from the evidence," the instructions said, "is not whether some other or lesser force might not have been an adequate defense from bodily harm, but whether, when the defendant acted, he had reasonable cause to believe such act was necessary to protect himself."

Actual Danger Not Necessary.

The instructions further read that it is not necessary, in order to acquit on the ground of self defense, that the danger should have been actual or real, or that the danger should have been impending and about to fall. All that is necessary is that the defendant had cause to believe and did believe those facts. On the other hand it is not enough that the defendant should have so believed. He must have had reasonable cause to so believe.

"Whether or not he had reasonable cause is for you to determine under all facts and circumstances given in evidence," the court pointed out. "If, upon a consideration of evidence, including that upon the question of self defense, you have a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, you should acquit him."

All evidence introduced by the state touching upon the alleged improper relations of the defendant toward the wife of Leonard was admitted by the court for the sole purpose of throwing light, if any, on the question as to who was the aggressor in the struggle which ended in the shooting of the deceased.

A Delay Until 1:30.

Objections by the defense to certain instructions offered by the State, caused adjournment of court from 11 to 1:30 o'clock. The jury was excused until this time to allow the court to decide which of the State's instructions should be given to the jury.

Arguments began immediately after the reading of the instructions, with W. A. Blagg giving the first argument for the State. He was followed by T. A. Cummins, of the firm of Cook & Cummins, defending Ashbrook. Senator M. E. Ford was to speak next on behalf of the State, to be followed by L. C. Cook, and the arguments concluded by Prosecuting Attorney George P. Wright.

The morning session opened with the defense placing Oscar Ashbrook, son of Thomas Ashbrook, on the stand. He testified as to the poor health of his father the past year, and also about the revolver which he said he had traded to his father for a rifle several months ago.

Rebuttal Testimony Given.

As one of the other defense witnesses had not arrived, the State recomended its rebuttal, placing Mose Hahn again on the stand. He was questioned whether he saw a flatiron in the Leonard home when he examined Leonard to see whether he was dead. Mr. Hahn replied he hadn't, but on objection by the defense to any further testimony regarding the search for a flatiron, alleged by the defense to have been in Leonard's possession in his struggle with Ashbrook, was sustained.

Vern Dolph, U. S. Reavis and Marion Minter were recalled and testified they had smelled liquor on Ashbrook the evening of the tragedy.

Mrs. Dewey Leonard was the last State's witness during its rebuttal testimony. She testified there was no revolver on a dresser in the bedroom the afternoon of March 2 which Ashbrook said he saw there and used when he shot Leonard. She also said that Leonard did not go back into the bedroom again after he ran from it when Ashbrook started to shoot.

The jury was then excused to 1:30 o'clock and D. B. Warren of Burlington Junction was placed on the stand by L. C. Cook so that the court might pass upon more evidence. Mr. Warren testified that he saw Mr. Hahn early March 3 and that Mr. Hahn made a statement which he heard. Mr. Hahn said that Mrs. Leonard had told him that in the fight Leonard had a flatiron in his hand, Mr. Warren testified.

The Defense Rests.

C. T. Wagner of Burlington Junction, a plumber, told that Mr. Hahn, in his place of business told about Leonard's having a flatiron. Mr. Cook asked the court that the jury be called in and be allowed to hear the evidence just given. He said the witness, Mr. Hahn, had told his testimony in good faith, that it had but partially been discredited by the State because he did not relate his testimony about the flatiron to Mr. Wright, at the coroner's inquest and the preliminary hearing. It was held incompetent and the defense rested.

Ashbrook Claim Corroborated.

The defense contention that Leonard had a flatiron in his hand when he attacked Ashbrook was corroborated by a witness yesterday afternoon when Mose A. Hahn, a contractor at Burlington Junction, told the jury that Mrs. Leonard had told him this immediately after he had viewed Leonard's body.

However, the prosecuting attorney partially discounted his testimony, when, on cross examination, Mr. Hahn admitted that he was hard of hearing and might not have understood Mrs. Leonard correctly.

Mr. Hahn lives two blocks from the Leonard home, and was on his way home when Mrs. Leonard, coming from the Ashbrook house, stopped him and asked him to go in and see how badly her husband was wounded, Mr. Hahn testified. She first told him that "they had been drinking and had gotten in an argument."

After it was decided that Leonard was dead, and when Mr. Hahn turned to leave, the witness testified Mrs. Leonard said: "Dewey had a flatiron but I don't think Tom should have shot him, because he didn't have a gun." Mr. Wright tried to break down this testimony, damaging to the state's case, by asking if it was not possible that Mrs. Leonard had said "unarmed" instead of flatiron? Mr. Hahn thought this might have been possible because of his defective hearing, but he thought he heard Mrs. Leonard rightly.

Ashbrook Sometimes Vague.

Mr. Hahn was introduced as a witness after the cross-examination of Ashbrook, who was inclined to be vague in his answers to the prosecuting attorney's question, relative to the place where he was standing when he shot at Leonard. He couldn't remember how many shots he fired, saying he thought he fired more than one. He wasn't positive on the cross-examination what Leonard had in his hand during the fight.

His opening testimony related to his personal history. He was born and reared in Russell County, Kentucky. A brother, who is here, lives at Flat Bush, which is near Somerset. His two sons, Oscar and Wesley have been engaged in the dray business at Burlington Junction for the last three years. The pistol had been in the family for several years, Ashbrook said, his son, Wesley, having brought it from Nebraska, selling it to his brother, Oscar, who in turn traded it to the father.

The revolver was kept in a curry comb box in the barn near their house and Ashbrook said he had loaned it to Leonard a few days prior to the homicide, as Leonard wanted to kill a horse.

Seven Character Witnesses.

Seven character witnesses of Burlington Junction told that Ashbrook was known in the community to be of a peaceful nature, and that his character was good. They included T. E. Fordyce, who is in the ice business; C. I. Hann, cashier of the First National Bank; Knox Alexander, real estate agent and justice of the peace; Chaney Ferguson, lumberman and former postmaster; W. T. Aesdale, merchant; Charles H. Caldwell, farmer; and E. D. Wedge, produce dealer.

Wesley Ashbrook was the next, the tenth, defense witness. His testimony related to the family business and the health of his father, which had been poor the last year. Leo Yates was next called. He said he had worked for Ashbrook and told of an occasion when he and Ashbrook had brought in a load of oats from a farm in the country and when they came to weigh the load, he had used a cartridge, of .25 caliber, that Ashbrook produced from his pockets to mark down the weights.

W. W. Jones, who is interested in a meat store at Burlington Junction, related that he had bought a horse hide from Leonard just a few days before the Leonard-Ashbrook trouble. W. E. Abel, also interested in a meat meat and grocery store, testified that he had sold groceries to the Leonards and that Ashbrook said he would stand good for the bill, if Leonard did not pay it.

Track Meet Extra.

The Democrat-Forum will publish a track meet extra immediately after the close of the last event at the State Teachers College tomorrow afternoon. It will contain a complete list of the winners in the three-day contests.

Mrs. C. E. Hull is representing the womens society of the Christian Church at the State conventoon at Chillicothe this week. She went via the Burlington route on Monday evening in order that she should not miss any part of the programs which were to begin Tuesday.

The past week has been favorable for drying the ground and as a result the farmers have been quite busy for the past few days sowing oats and grass seed. A large acreage of oats are being sown but somewhat less than would have been sown had the weather been more favorable earlier in the month. Harold Hinton of Bloomdale neighborhood is the first one we have seen planting corn this spring. He was planting a field of timothy on Thursday and the ground seemed to be in fairly good condition.

A heavy shower fell here Thursday night and a few hail stones fell but did no damage.

Field work will be delayed for the remainder of the week.

Notes of the Contests

If officials of the contests are able to keep contestants and visitors off the track at the College, it will not have been injured materially by the downpour last night. As early as 6 o'clock this morning workmen were busy on the track. Both curves were covered by several inches of water, but ditches were dug, and before 10 o'clock all of the water had been run off.

The big trouble now is that many persons are cutting across the track and leaving deep footprints on it. A corps of ten students has been on duty since 9 o'clock this morning, trying to keep people from crossing the track except on boards provided for the purpose.

The oval is drying rapidly, and by tomorrow morning—if there is no more rain—it should be in excellent shape.

The rain did not injure the rockdust covered tennis courts, and the tournament started this morning as per schedule. A stiff wind handicapped the players somewhat, however.

Indications are that visitors will be able to take advantage of the fare and a half privilege extended by the Western Passenger Association. One hundred and fifty vouchers were necessary to secure this, and almost that number had been reached by 10 o'clock this morning.

The girls track meet this afternoon was run on the grass in the quarter-stretch on the College field. A power mower cut the grass short, and lanes for the races were then marked. This slowed down the races somewhat, but it was far better than plowing the muddy track.

Claude Thompson, Burlington Junction coach, was caught unawares this morning. He did not know that there were to be preliminaries in girls' track, and at the last moment he had to chase all over the College campus and buildings collecting his participants.

The Savannah girl tracksters drove to Maryville this morning. Their car became stuck in the mud, and they were late for the preliminaries. Special qualification rounds had to be run for them.

Leston Webb, former College athlete, is here with entrants from Bethany, where he is the high school coach. C. T. Richards, well-known as "Big Bill" is a visitor from Pattonsburg, where he is superintendent.

Although all available parking space in the vicinity of the Wabash depot was taken last night, there were not enough cars to meet the 7:40 o'clock train. Some thirty automobiles will be needed to meet the two trains tonight.

A number of the musical organizations here for the contests are in uniform. Bethany, for instance, and Mound City.

Preliminaries in the small musical events are being held in the room which formerly was the College library. Some 250 chairs were moved into the room and placed in position in less than five minutes by a score of students this morning. The debate this afternoon between Maryville and Lock Springs was also held in this room.

Miss Helen Bartholomew of Rock Port is visiting her cousins, Miss Ethel Muntz and Miss Hazel Clark, and attending the high school contests at the College. She was a Latin contestant this morning.

Miss Geneva Harvey of Savannah is the week-end guest of Miss Neva Wilkerson. Miss Harvey represented the Savannah High School in the declamatory contest this morning.
